Hoogetboom Origin

THE VAN DEVENTER FAMILY

JAN PIETERSZ VAN DEVENTER, FOUNDER

1. Jan (John) Pietersz van Deventer, bp. April 24, 1627, in the City of Deventer, Province of Overijssel, was the founder of the family in America. He was the son of Pieter Hermans van Deventer, from Twello, and Fenneke Hendricks, born in Weseke, Westphalia. He died ca. 1692 in New Netherland.

The middle name of Jan Pietersz (or Pietersen) van Deventer is from the first name of his father, with "sz" or "sen" added, signifying "son of." Such middle names are identifying in baptisms, but are seldom used in signatures.

In the year 1652, in the village of Houten, Province of Utrecht, Jan Pietersz van Deventer and Maria Hoogetboom were married, in a church that is still in use. Maria was born at Houten, a village about four miles from the City of Utrecht, and was the daughter of Rochus Ardiaens Hoogetboom and Maria Willems van Odyck (b. at Odyck). The name Hoogetboom is pronounced with the sound of long "o" in both syllables, and the word means high tree. Rochus is a Dutch christian name after St. Rochus (French Roger). The Reformed church changed Rochus to Rutger.

Rochus Adriaens Hoogetboom (b. before 1597), the father of Maria, was a resident of Houten and for many years, from 1617, held a position of considerable importance as secretary of the town, and was an officer in the church there. He was the son of Adriaen Hoogetboom, b. before 1577.

Cem. Record, village of Ghoy and Houten.

In connection with a mortgage, dated at Houten April 28, 1653, by the heirs of Rochus Adriaens Hoogetboom, on the house situated next to the parsonage on the Brink (square), in the village of Houten, his children appeared at a hearing before the schepens in the "noble and mighty Lords 'States' Court of Houten and Ghoy" and their names are set out as heirs of Rochus Adriaens Hoogetboom "in his life Secretary of Houten, and Maria Willems, daughter van Odyck, their parents." The mortgage was cancelled Sept. 25, 1660, signed by the schepens and by Cornelis Hoogetboom, brother of Rochus Adriaens Hoogetboom.

From records Ghoy & Houten; Catalogue Judicial Archives Utrecht, No. 1287, folio 37.

Deeds dated Houten Jan. 31, 1656, and Aug. 31, 1657 (Nos. 187, 290), and Utrecht Jan. 15, 1666 (Catal. Jud. Arch. Utrecht No. 1287), pertain to the family of Rochus Adriaens Hoogeboom and set out the names of his children. They are:

1. Adriaen Rochus Hoogeboom, living in Doorn.
2. Jan, m. Sept. 25, 1653 Adriaentje de Roy; then living in Harmony Inn, Springwegh, and in 1656 at Dom churchyard, Rhenish Vinyard (inn), Utrecht; d. Feb. 16, 1660, leaving wife and children.
3. Willem, lived in Houten.
4. Willempje, m. Jan van Ceulen, lived in Houten.
5. Sara, m. Jan. 2, 1659, in Utrecht, Jacob Hendrick Munick, living in Utrecht.
6. Maria, m. 1652 Jan Pietersz van Deventer.
7. Janniche, b. abt. 1635; m. Roeloff Everts van Achterberch, res. Maersen.
8. Cornelia, m. July 11, 1649 Hendrick Smidders, from Kempen, res. Utrecht.

From various old records, including a deed executed by Jan van Deventer, it appears that at and prior to the time of his marriage, his wife's married sister Cornelia lived in Utrecht, in a house near the great church. The house was in an angle facing the plaza on which the old church and tower stand, and is still in use.

Cornelis Hoogeboom, a bachelor uncle of Maria, also lived in Utrecht, and died in 1664. He left a substantial bequest to his niece Maria, who was then married to Jan and living in New Netherland. (Houten Records). Jan executed a power of attorney, along with his wife, to collect this legacy and for the conveyance of property inherited by her from her father.

From an examination of the records in the Province of Utrecht, it was found that Jan Pietersz (van Deventer), kleermaker (tailor), resided in Utrecht and was admitted to the Dutch church there in the 1650's. He later lived in Bunnik, southeast of Utrecht, from 1653 to 1661, when he emigrated from the Netherlands to America. The old church in this village is still in use and has some copies of the old records, but no list of the members at the time of Jan's residence there, and the record of baptisms is fragmentary. There is a record showing that on April 4, 1658, Jan, the Kleermaker (tailor), baptised a daughter, Marieken (old form of Maria). The wife's name is not given. That they were members of the Dutch church at Bunnik is attested by the fact that they brought letters to New Netherland on which they were admitted to membership in the Dutch church at Breukelen (Brooklyn), N. Y., Dec. 25, 1662.

Records of Houten and Utrecht, Holland, furnished by Jos. Goudswaard, Genealogist.

*This page is from The Holland Society of
New York*

The name Hogeboom is derived from the Dutch words
"hoog" meaning high, and "boom" meaning tree, "high tree", a name indicating height or a local name. Early traces of the family are found at The Hague, Hoiloo, Haarlem, Benschop, Makrum, Nieuwenierop and Amsterdam.

The progenitors of this family in America, two brothers, Bartholomew and Cornelis, came to New Netherland in 1651, as near as can be determined from Nieuwerck, situated on the Zuider Zee about twenty-five miles south-east of Amsterdam, in the Province of Gelderland, Holland.

Cornelis Pieterse Hogeboom was a brick and tile maker of Kingston and New Amsterdam. It is reported that his success was important because it rendered Manhattan independent of the brick supply from neighboring places and the mother country.

He was in Beverwyck in 1655, New Amstel on the Delaware in 1657, New Amsterdam in 1659 and in Kingston in 1665 where he lived until his death.

In 1668 he asked permission to keep an Evening School and in 1674 was nominated for Schepen (Magistrate).

In 1686 his name was on the roll of a Company of Foot Militia in Kingston.

On August 17, 1676, Cornelis and his second wife,

Jacob Gardenier, son of Jan of Holland, settled in Beverwyck, on the North river, and was a carpenter there in 1638. He appears to have removed to New Amsterdam, for in 1656, he owned property on the north side of Wall street, between William and Pearl streets, which he divided into lots and sold by his agent, Lander Laanderst Glen. He also bought land in Kinderhook, which he sold to his son-in-law, Adam Dingman, and also at Goyer'kill, opposite Apiker's island or Schodaack. His first wife was Josyna, who died Feb. 1668. He afterwards married Barentje Stratsman, widow of Hans Coverdale. In 1688, she was again a widow, with fifteen children, ten by the first, and five by the second marriage, all living. The following children of Jacob Gardenier arrived at mature age, and had families:

Jan.

Samuel.

Andries.

Note. The New Amsterdam property may have come to Gardenier by inheritance, and as the new owner sold it through his agents, he may not have removed there himself. The New York records should be examined.

Her portrait, in oil, by an unknown artist, is in the possession of Mrs. William L. Bramhall, Washington, D. C. (1924)

After the death of Peter Hogeboom, his widow married Levi Cutler, by whom she had several children.

Note. An important, and at that time, an interesting legal question arose, growing out of the will of John C. Hogeboom, which I will relate from memory, as I understood it at the time. John C. Hogeboom was a man of considerable wealth, owning several farms at the time of his death, June 31, 1840. By his will, he devised to his son, Peter, for life, the farm on which he, Peter, then lived, and after his death to his son, then a boy of four or five years of age, the grandson of the testator, with a proviso, that in case the boy should die without lawful issue, the estate so devised, should revert to the heirs of the testator. The event anticipated really happened. The boy survived his father, and died without issue. An action of ejectment was brought by the heirs or representatives of the testator, to recover the property, and it was held that the son of Peter took an estate in fee under the will, and by inheritance, and that by the laws of New York, the testator could not bind or control the property beyond two lives in esse, at the testator's death. So the property went to the widow of Peter, who took by inheritance.

WILL OF PIETER HOGEBOOM (4)

Son of Bartholomeus, son of Pieter Hogeboom (Hoogeboom) of Holland. Translated from the Dutch.

In the name of God, Amen. On this twentieth day of June, One thousand seven hundred and forty six, I, Peter Hogeboom, of Claverack, in the county of Albany * in the province of New York, being of sound mind and memory, God be praised for the same, considering the frailty of my body, and knowing that it is appointed that all men must die, thus make and ordain this my last will and testament, that is to say, principally, I give my soul into the hands of God, the Lord who first gave it, and my body, I commend to the earth, to be buried in a Christian manner.

First, I give to my eldest son's son Peter Hogeboom for his birthright as eldest son  the sum of ten pounds York money.

Second, I give to my eldest son's (Cornelis) son Pieter Hogeboom, and his heirs, the neck and the strip (streek) at Canaan, and all that lies between that and the old farm for his inheritance, on condition that he pays, six years after my death to his sister Rachel (Hilletie) Hogeboom and to his brother Cornelis Hogeboom, to each per head, thirty Pounds York money.

Third, I give and bequeath to my son Bartholomeus Hogeboom, and to his heirs, the old farm at Canaan, as the deed shows on the record, and also sixty acres lying upon the east side of the Kings path (Coning's pat), and also thirty five acres on the south, next the heirs of the widow Beldins and Saml. Robens, which lies undivided with Abram Halenbeck, on condition that Bartholomeus Hogeboom and his heirs, shall pay six years after my death to Catryntie Hogeboom, wife of Ph. Conyn, and his heirs, the sum of fifty five pounds York money, and to my daughter Hilletie Hogeboom, the wife of Jochem Radoliff, and her heirs, the sum of fifty five pounds York money, and to my daughter Arriatie Hogeboom, the wife of Lowr. van Alee, deceased, and her heirs, the sum of fifty five pounds York money, and to my daughter Gertruy Hogeboom, the wife of William van Ness, and her heirs, the sum of fifty five pounds York money.

Fourth. I give and bequeath to my son Johannis Hogeboom, and to his heirs, the east or rear end of the farm at Claverack, in the manor of Renselaer, as the division fence now stands, right through north and south, so far as my right extends, and as the deed shows, on condition that Johannis Hogeboom, and his heirs, pay six years after my death to Catryntie Hogeboom, wife of Ph. Conyn, and her heirs, the sum of thirty two pounds, ten shillings, York money, and to my daughter Hilletie Hogeboom, the wife of Jochem Radoliff, and her heirs, the sum of thirty two pounds, ten shillings York money, and to Arriantie Hogeboom, wife of Lowerens van Alee, deceased, and her heirs, the sum of thirty two pounds, ten shillings York money, and to Gertruy Hogeboom, wife of Wm. van Ness, and her heirs, the sum of thirty two pounds, ten shillings York money.

Fifth. I give and bequeath to my son Jeremias Hogeboom, and his heirs, the foremost or westerly end of the farm, with all the buildings thereon, at Claverack, straight through as the division fence now stands, north and south, as far as my right extends, as the deed shows, on condition that Jeremias Hogeboom pays six years after my death to Catryntie Hogeboom, wife of Ph. Conyn, and her heirs, the sum of forty two pounds, ten shillings York money, and to my daughter Hilletie Hogeboom, wife of Jochem Radoliff, and her heirs, the sum of forty two pounds, ten shillings York money, and to my daughter Arriantie Hogeboom, wife of Lowr. van Alle, deceased, the sum of forty two pounds, ten shillings York money, and to Gertruy Hogeboom, wife of Willm. van Ness, and her heirs, the sum of forty two pounds, ten shillings York money.

Sixth. I give and bequeath to my daughter Marytie Hogeboom, wife of Jochem van Valkenburgh, and her heirs, the bush farm where Barth. Hogeboom now dwells, the old and the new, for which I have conveyance and for which I have no conveyance as yet, just as it is with all my right and title for her inheritance; and if so, be that Bartholomeus Hogeboom will not deliver it up peaceably, then he shall be out off from the farm at Canaan, and if it happen that the farm where Barth. now dwells shall be lost through any process of law, then shall the ten heirs be holden to make good again to Marytie and her heirs, her inheritance, and if Bartholomeus keeps it for his portion, then shall all the heirs be holden if he lose it by process of law, also to make good the inheritance for no longer time than six years after my death.

Seventh. I order that Gertruy Hogeboom, wife of William van Ness, and her heirs, shall be holden to pay six years after my death, the sum of ten pounds York money to all my ten heirs, to each twenty shillings, before she receive the lot of ground.

Eighth. My daughters Catryntie and Hilletie and Arriantie and Gertruy, shall be holden six years after my death, when they shall have received their inheritance, as aforementioned, to pay the four of them twenty pounds York money to Marytie Hogeboom, the wife of Jochem Valkenburgh, and her heirs.

Ninth. I give to my son Jeremias Hogeboom, a negro called Saes, and a plow with all its appurtenances, which I left there on the farm and three cows and three mares, and three geldings from the stock, which I have on the farm.

Tenth, I bequeath to all my heirs, my eldest son's son Pieter, and Bartholomeus, and Johannis and Jeremias, to my daughters, Catryntie and Hilletie and Arriantie and Marytie and Gertruy and Annatie, all my negroes and negresses, big and little, young and old, and all my horses and cattle, and furthermore all my moveable goods, from the largest to the smallest, that may be found after my death, to each, his just tenth part, and furthermore, all the heirs shall be held after my death, to contribute equally until all my debts which may then appear, shall be paid.

Lastly, I order and appoint my three sons, Bartholomeus, Johannis and Jeremias, all three as executors of this, my last will, and desire (them) to direct matters as I have desired them in this, my last will and testament, that my children may receive each what is provided for him individually, and in the fear of the Lord, use the same.

N. B. If there be any that should (wish to) sell their estate, they shall be holden to sell to the nearest heirs, if they will give as much as any one else.

DEATH OF JOHN T. HOGEBOOM.

(Albany Times, Dem. Feb. 11, 1886.)

John T. Hogeboom, one of the best known and universally respected citizens of Columbia county, died this morning at his home at Ghent, of brain fever. He was born in Ghent, in 1818, and his ancestors were among the first settlers of the county. His father, Tobias L. Hogeboom, was a member of assembly in 1832, and was presidential elector in 1844. An anti-slavery democrat of the Silas Wright school, he allied himself with the republican party at its formation, and was always a sturdy, uncompromising leader in its campaigns, a hard hitter and a fair fighter. While a democrat, he served eight years as judge of Columbia county, being an incumbent during the first two terms, after the adoption of the constitution of 1846. In 1857, he was a member of assembly, and again in 1876 and 1877. In 1861, he was appointed General Appraiser of the custom house in New York, and fulfilled his duties to the general satisfaction of both the importers and the government, and retired, after holding the position a number of years, a poorer man than when he took the office. After his last appearance in the assembly, he retired from public life, and devoted his time to his farm. The present member from Columbia county, John C. Hogeboom, is his cousin.

(BROOKLYN DAILY EAGLE, MARCH 14, 1895.)

CHARLES L. HOGEBOOM.

The death is announced of Dr. Charles L. Hogeboom, in the 68th year of his age. For several years, and until a few years ago, he resided in Jamaica. Then he moved to the neighborhood of Cedarhurst. Here he resided during the closing period of his life. He was well known in surgery. His operations in that art, and his views as a teacher of it, through his writings, won him respect. He was also an intelligent sanitarian. He lectured on water supply, and drainage, and on forestry preservation before the medical societies of the three counties, comprising this island, and before affiliated bodies elsewhere. Nor did strictly professional subjects engage his pen. He wrote often and well on ethical and public matters, for papers in Jamaica, and at Rockaway, on the island, for the Times and Tribune in New York, and for this journal. Record would be unjustly incomplete, if the abilities of this versatile man, as a sculptor were ignored. His devotion to the latter art, had its basis in his excellence as an anatomist, and in a natural and cultivated proficiency for portraiture, whether with pencil or brush. The extension of this gift to sculpture, began modestly, but progressed almost to fame. His bas reliefs in clay, plaster and bronze of Irving, Bryant, Jefferson, Franklin, Hamilton and Lafayette, were supplemented by like repre-

representations of many private citizens of professional and social eminence, and by ideal faces of men and women, not a few. Dr. Hogeboom did not represent the proverb of "effective in much, but eminent in nothing." Effective in much he was, eminent in medicine, surgery, sculpture and engraving, and in scientific authorship, he also was. The worlds of art, of learning, and of literature were more familiar to him, and he was more at home in them, than could be said of the world of affairs. His outlook on politics, parties and contests for political power was ingenuous to childlikeness, but was marked by candor, purity and faith. He will long be remembered and profoundly regretted by a large circle of professional and personal friends.

CHARLES H. BRAMHALL.

FROM THE ALBANY EVENING JOURNAL, NOV. 4, 1893.

The remains of Judge Charles H. Bramhall, who died in Chicago, Wednesday, were brought to this city last night, and the burial will occur this afternoon at Ghent, Columbia county.

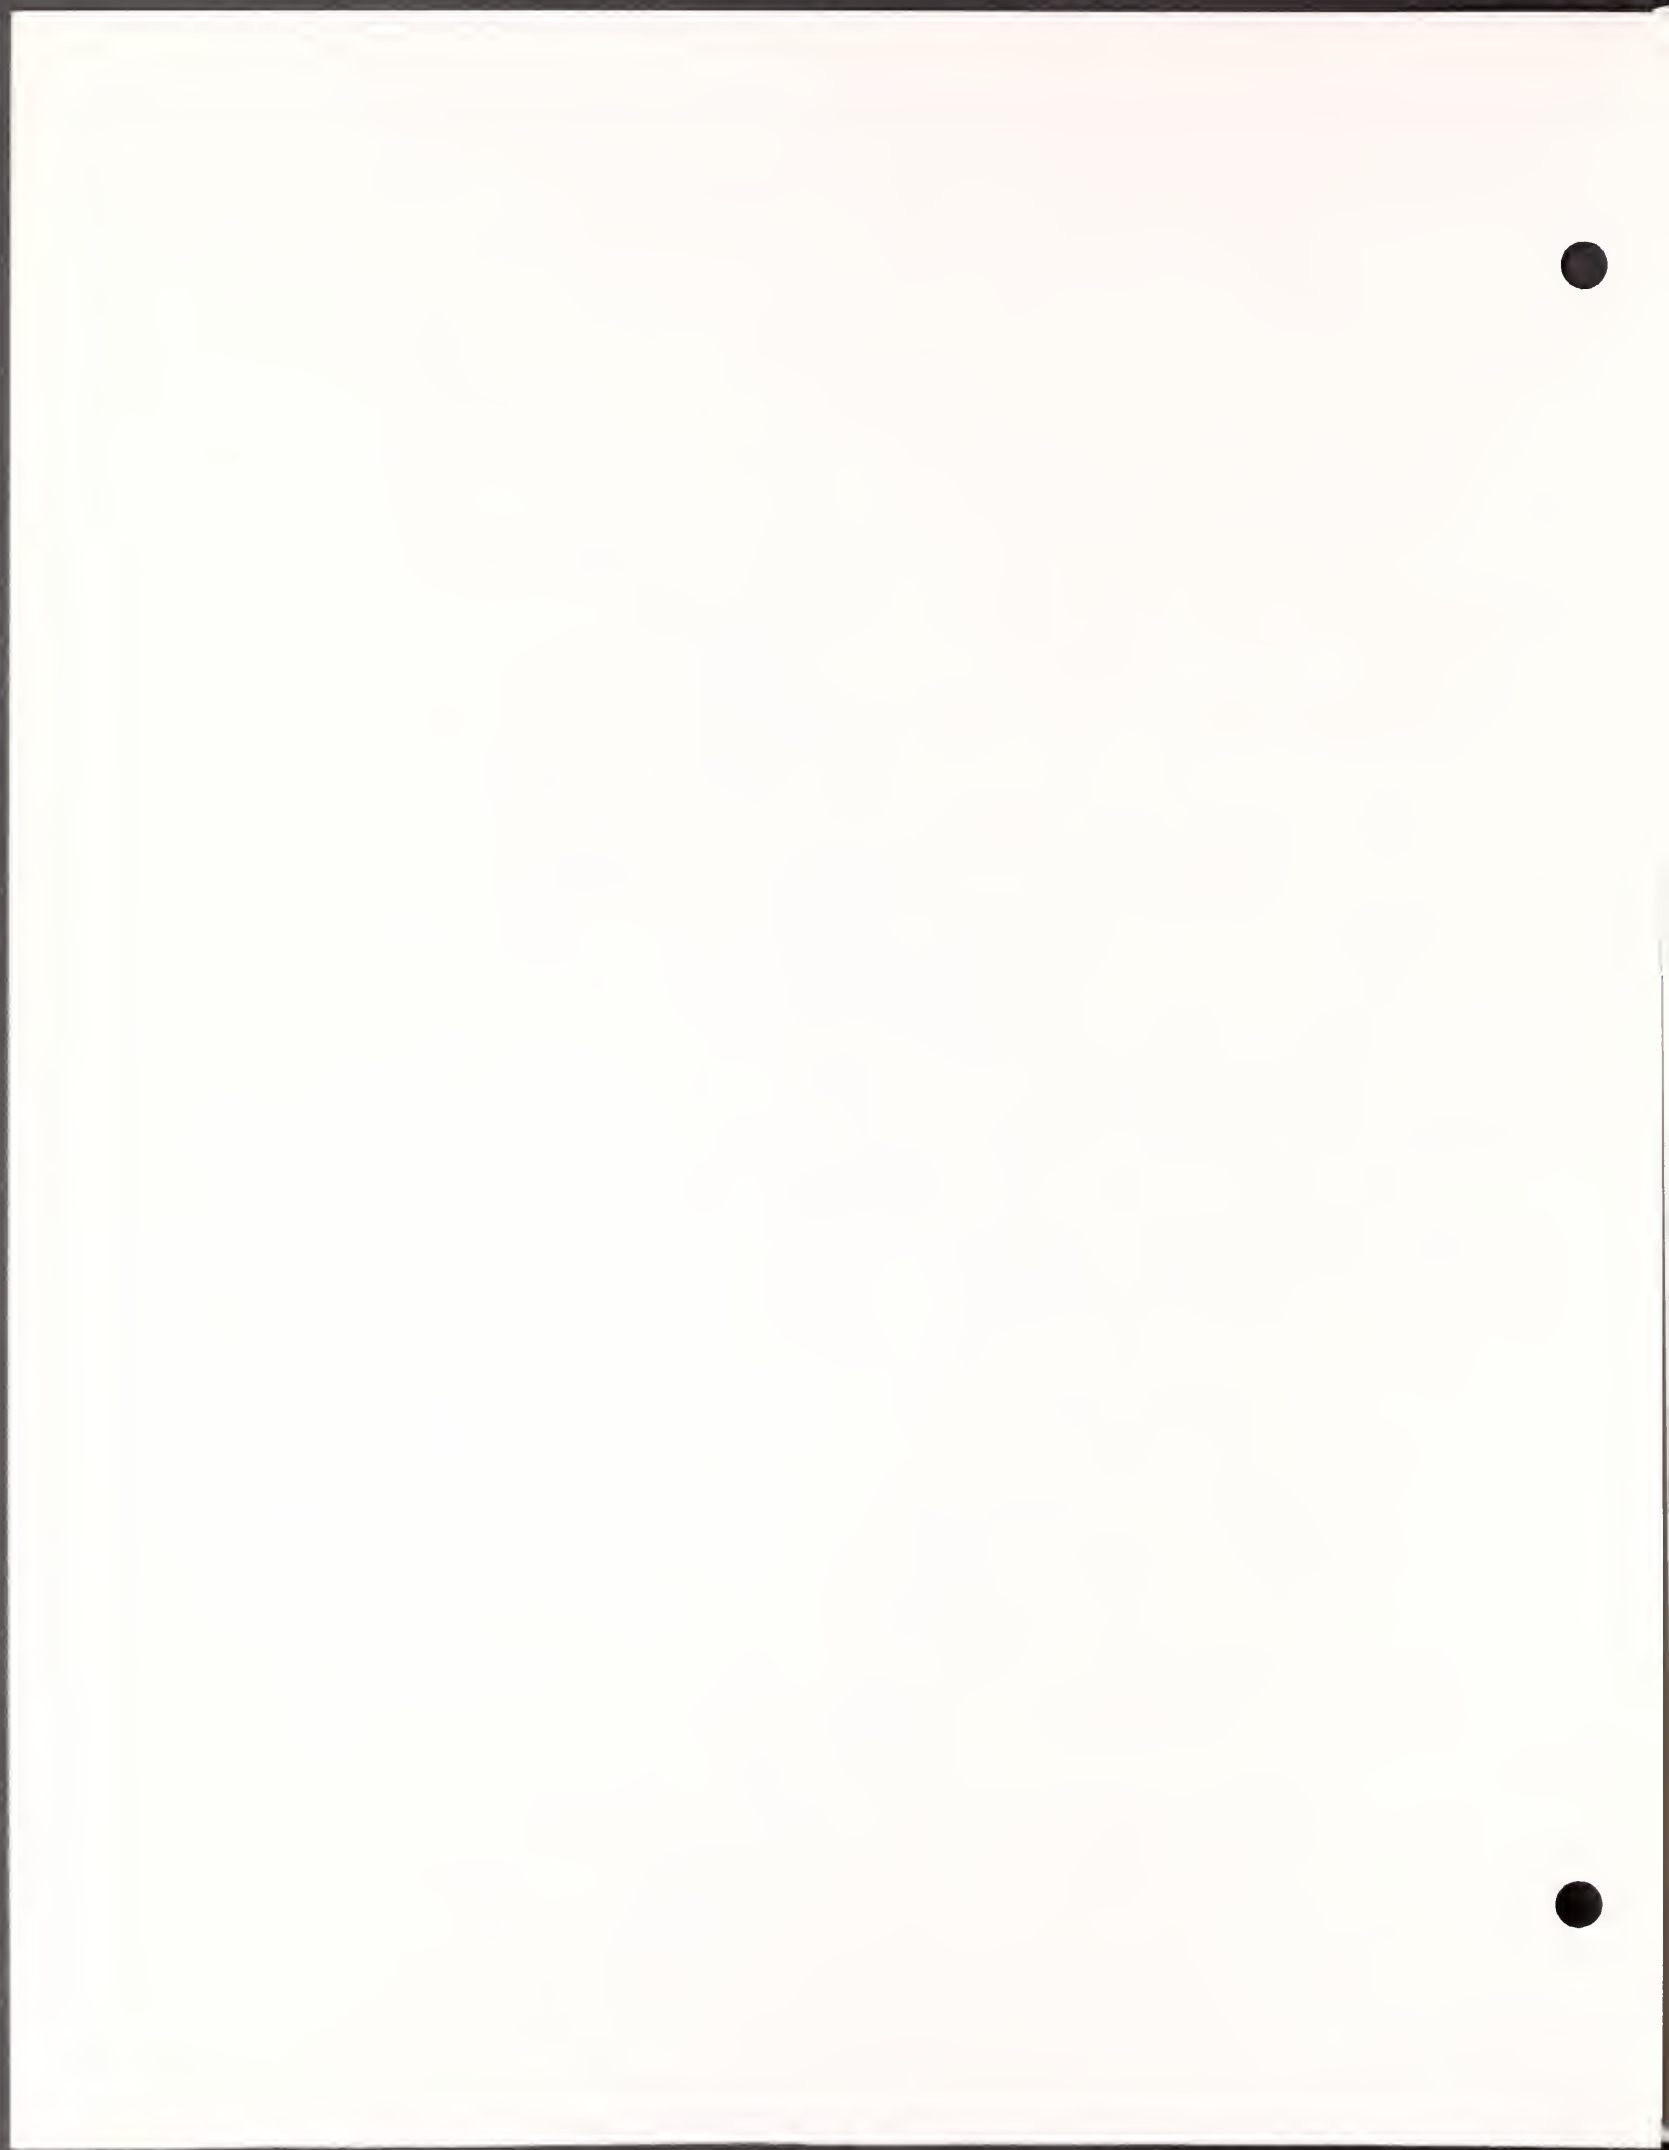

Judge Bramhall was born in the village of Nassau, Rensselaer county, N. Y., Aug. 15, 1811. He was the son of Moses Bramhall and Elizabeth Hulbert, of Austerlitz, Columbia county, and was descended from the Bramhalls of Plymouth, Mass. One of the direct ancestors, George Bramhall, was mortally wounded in resisting an attack from the Indians in 1689, at Portland, Me. Graduating from the Ashley High School at Canaan, Mr. Bramhall taught a school, and then studied law in Hudson and Buffalo. He was admitted to the bar in 1834, and two years later, appointed a master in chancery by Governor Marcy. In 1841, he removed to Albany, where he became a member of the law firm of Koon, Bramhall and Ferguson. In 1845, he was appointed by Governor Wright, a judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Albany county, and held the office until it was abolished by the constitution of 1848. After residing in Kinderhook, Columbia county, for seven years, he removed to the city of New York in 1857, and not long afterwards, was appointed by Governor King, one of the board of wardens of the port. He was reappointed by Governors King and Morgan, and served much of the time as president of the board, and always as its legal adviser.

An anti-slavery Democrat of the Jeffersonian school, he took an active part in the agitation preceding the formation of the Republican party, and strongly supported Fremont in the campaign of 1856, and Lincoln in the campaigns of 1860 and 1864. Before the war, he acted with the "underground railroad" people in behalf of the refugee slaves, and during the war, he was closely associated with the Union Defense committee, and actively supported the government in its general policy, though advocating the emancipation of the slaves from the commencement. After the war, he removed to Virginia, where he purchased a farm in Fairfax county, near Falls Church, and took a prominent part in the reconstruction of the state. In March, 1869, he was appointed circuit judge of the Richmond county circuit, and held the office about two years, until the judicial offices by election by the Legislature, fell into the hands of the Democratic party. Since 1876, Judge Bramhall has resided in Washington, still active in mind and body, until prostrated in 1881 by a stroke of paralysis. Upon his partial recovery, he visited his son in Albany, and remained in his family, upon his removal to Chicago, last year. Judge Bramhall married, in 1835, Eliza, daughter of Judge Tobias L. Hogeboom, of Ghent, Columbia county. Their three sons are still living -- Colonel William L. Bramhall, (who served in the 93d. N. Y. Vols.) in Washington, D. C.; Frank J. Bramhall, who is with the Michigan Central railroad in Chicago, and John T. Bramhall, formerly of the "Evening Journal" staff, and lately on Major Handy's staff at the World's Fair in Chicago.

The above obituary notice, from its conciseness and exactness, I believe to have been written by my brother, Frank J., who was by nature, a scholar and a journalist. I will add that my father, on leaving the bench in Richmond, (where he was also judge of the hustings court and the court of probate) received the formal thanks of the entire bar (all politically opposed to him and all Yankees) for his impartial and courteous treatment, and for his fairness and ability in conducting his office, and in discharging his many duties, he having, for the first time in its history, cleaned up the docket of his court, which was loaded with over 1,500 cases. He introduced also, against the protest of his prosecuting attorney, the suspended sentence, in the case of juvenile offenders, with great success, and he broke up the system, in his court, of lawyers living off protracted litigation and administration of estates. His correspondence, with many of the leading men of the time, was of great interest to the historian, but I believe that none of it remains. Politically, the above notice will apply as well to his brother-in-law, John T. Hogeboom, with whom he was very closely associated.

HISTORIC MANSION BURNED.

NEW YORK SUN, 1889.

An interesting old mansion was destroyed by fire in Claverack, N. Y. on March 26, 1889, a mansion whose history dates back beyond the Revolution. To the present generation, it was known as the "Watson Webb house" from the name of its owner in the early part of the present century. Although the old mansion was the scene of many a merry making in colonial days, and saw many a bloody affray in the Revolution, being on debatable ground when the British were trying to cut their way through to New York from Lake Champlain and Saratoga, and although General Lafayette was sheltered under its roof, it is perhaps best remembered as the spot where the verses were written beginning:

"T'was the night before Christmas"

It was in 1704, when Killiaen Hogeboom took possession of a tract of land, 8 mile square, now including Claverack, three miles from the Hudson River, and to the east of the city of Hudson. It was purchased from Chancellor Livingston. Killiaen Hogeboom's son Jacobus began building the old mansion in 1727. It had generous halls and big rooms, and had a frontage of 63 feet, along which ran a capacious porch. Over the porch, clambered an ivy, which, as years rolled by, struck its roots deeper and wider into the soil, and extended its shade over portico and mansion. The interior was finished in the highest style of Dutch art. The fireplaces were of tiles, illustrating Scriptural subjects, and were brought from Amsterdam. The mantels were of wood, and were quaintly and curiously carved, and mural paintings served for a picture gallery. It is said that the furniture and expensive bricabrack, brought from the old country, made the mansion one of the most delightful places to be seen at that time, in the Hudson River valley, and that Dutch hospitality, made the spot famous, for good living up and down the river. It was during the Revolution, that the house was most famous for its hospitality. The property had descended to Gen. Samuel Webb, an officer in the Continental Army. Gen. Webb had married the granddaughter of Jacobus Hogeboom. It was when Lafayette was on a visit to Gen. Webb, that he etched on a window pane, with his diamond ring, his name, and date of his visit.

PROGRAMME.

The Time: The opening of the year 1788, and the year following. The New Constitution had been adopted by the Convention at Philadelphia, on the 17th day of September, 1787, and public attention was now centered upon the acceptance by the States, and the creation of a Nation, - or its rejection, and the formation of a number of independent, but feeble States. In New York State, opinion was divided. Commercial people, - what it is the fashion now to call "bourgeoise" - were fearful of New York losing her supremacy as the commercial center, advocated either control or independence. The Governor, George Clinton, Aaron Burr, and others of political influence, were of this class. The Schuylers, Jays, Livingstons, Van Rensselaers, et al., mostly landed gentry, approved the plan "to form a more perfect union, establish justice, promote domestic tranquillity" etc., as declared by the draft adopted by the Convention (although two of the New York delegates had withdrawn, leaving Hamilton to sign alone for his state.) This was the one topic of discussion, and we must not be surprised to find it very prominent in the letters.

The Place: New York City, - which then scarcely extended northward beyond Wall street, - and the hinterland of the Hudson, or North river, which was the main artery of travel, to the still primitively Dutch city of Willemstadt, or Beaverwyck, now called by the unwelcome name of Albany, given it to perpetuate one of the titles of the popish King James. In this hinterland, were the broad estates of the Van Rensselaers, Livingstons, Schuylers, Van Nesses, Van Bergens, Hogebooms and others, some acquired by royal grant and others, as the three last, by purchase. The Hogebooms first settled about Esopus, or Kingston, and later extended into the rich valleys of Columbia county, on what was originally the Livingston grant.

The Persons: Briefly, Stephen Hogeboom of Claverack (now Ghent) near Hudson, son of Jeremias, son of Pieter, son of Bartholomeus, son of Pieter of Holland. Pieter had married Janatje (Yanatchie, or Jane) Mulder (Miller) daughter of Clonelis Stephanse Mulder, son of Stephen of Guilderland, a family of Huguenot descent. His will devised a bauery (farm) in Claverack to his son Jeremias. Near by, in Stephen's time, were to farms of Tobias L. Hogeboom, Laurence and John C. Hogeboom. Stephen was a member of the state Constitutional Convention of 1801, of the Assembly of 1790-96, and state Senator 1805-8. He had been an officer in the Revolutionary army, and Lieut. Colonel of the Albany county militia. He must have been on the bench before he became Senator, for he held the popular title of Judge. Stephen had one son, Killeen, and four daughters. The two eldest, Christina and Jenny, were happily married, Polly was still a child, but Catherine, or Kitty, was a problem. Beautiful she was, if we may judge by her picture in the possession of the Webb family, with regularly formed features, bright, dark eyes, and dark ringlets which hung about her neck. But she had no mind to marry. Not in

Then came General Webb (of the Webbs of Dorsetshire, England) aide and private secretary to General Washington,-- the same who had issued the order for the reading of the Declaration of Independence in New York City; who had been wounded at Bunker Hill, taken prisoner on the Long Island expedition, was one of the founders of the Order of the Cincinnati, and was grand marshall during Washington's first inauguration, and accompanied the President-General (whom some persisted in calling "his majesty") from the City Hall to St. Paul's Chapel, and then to his home on Cherry Hill (Franklin Square.) General Webb was some character.

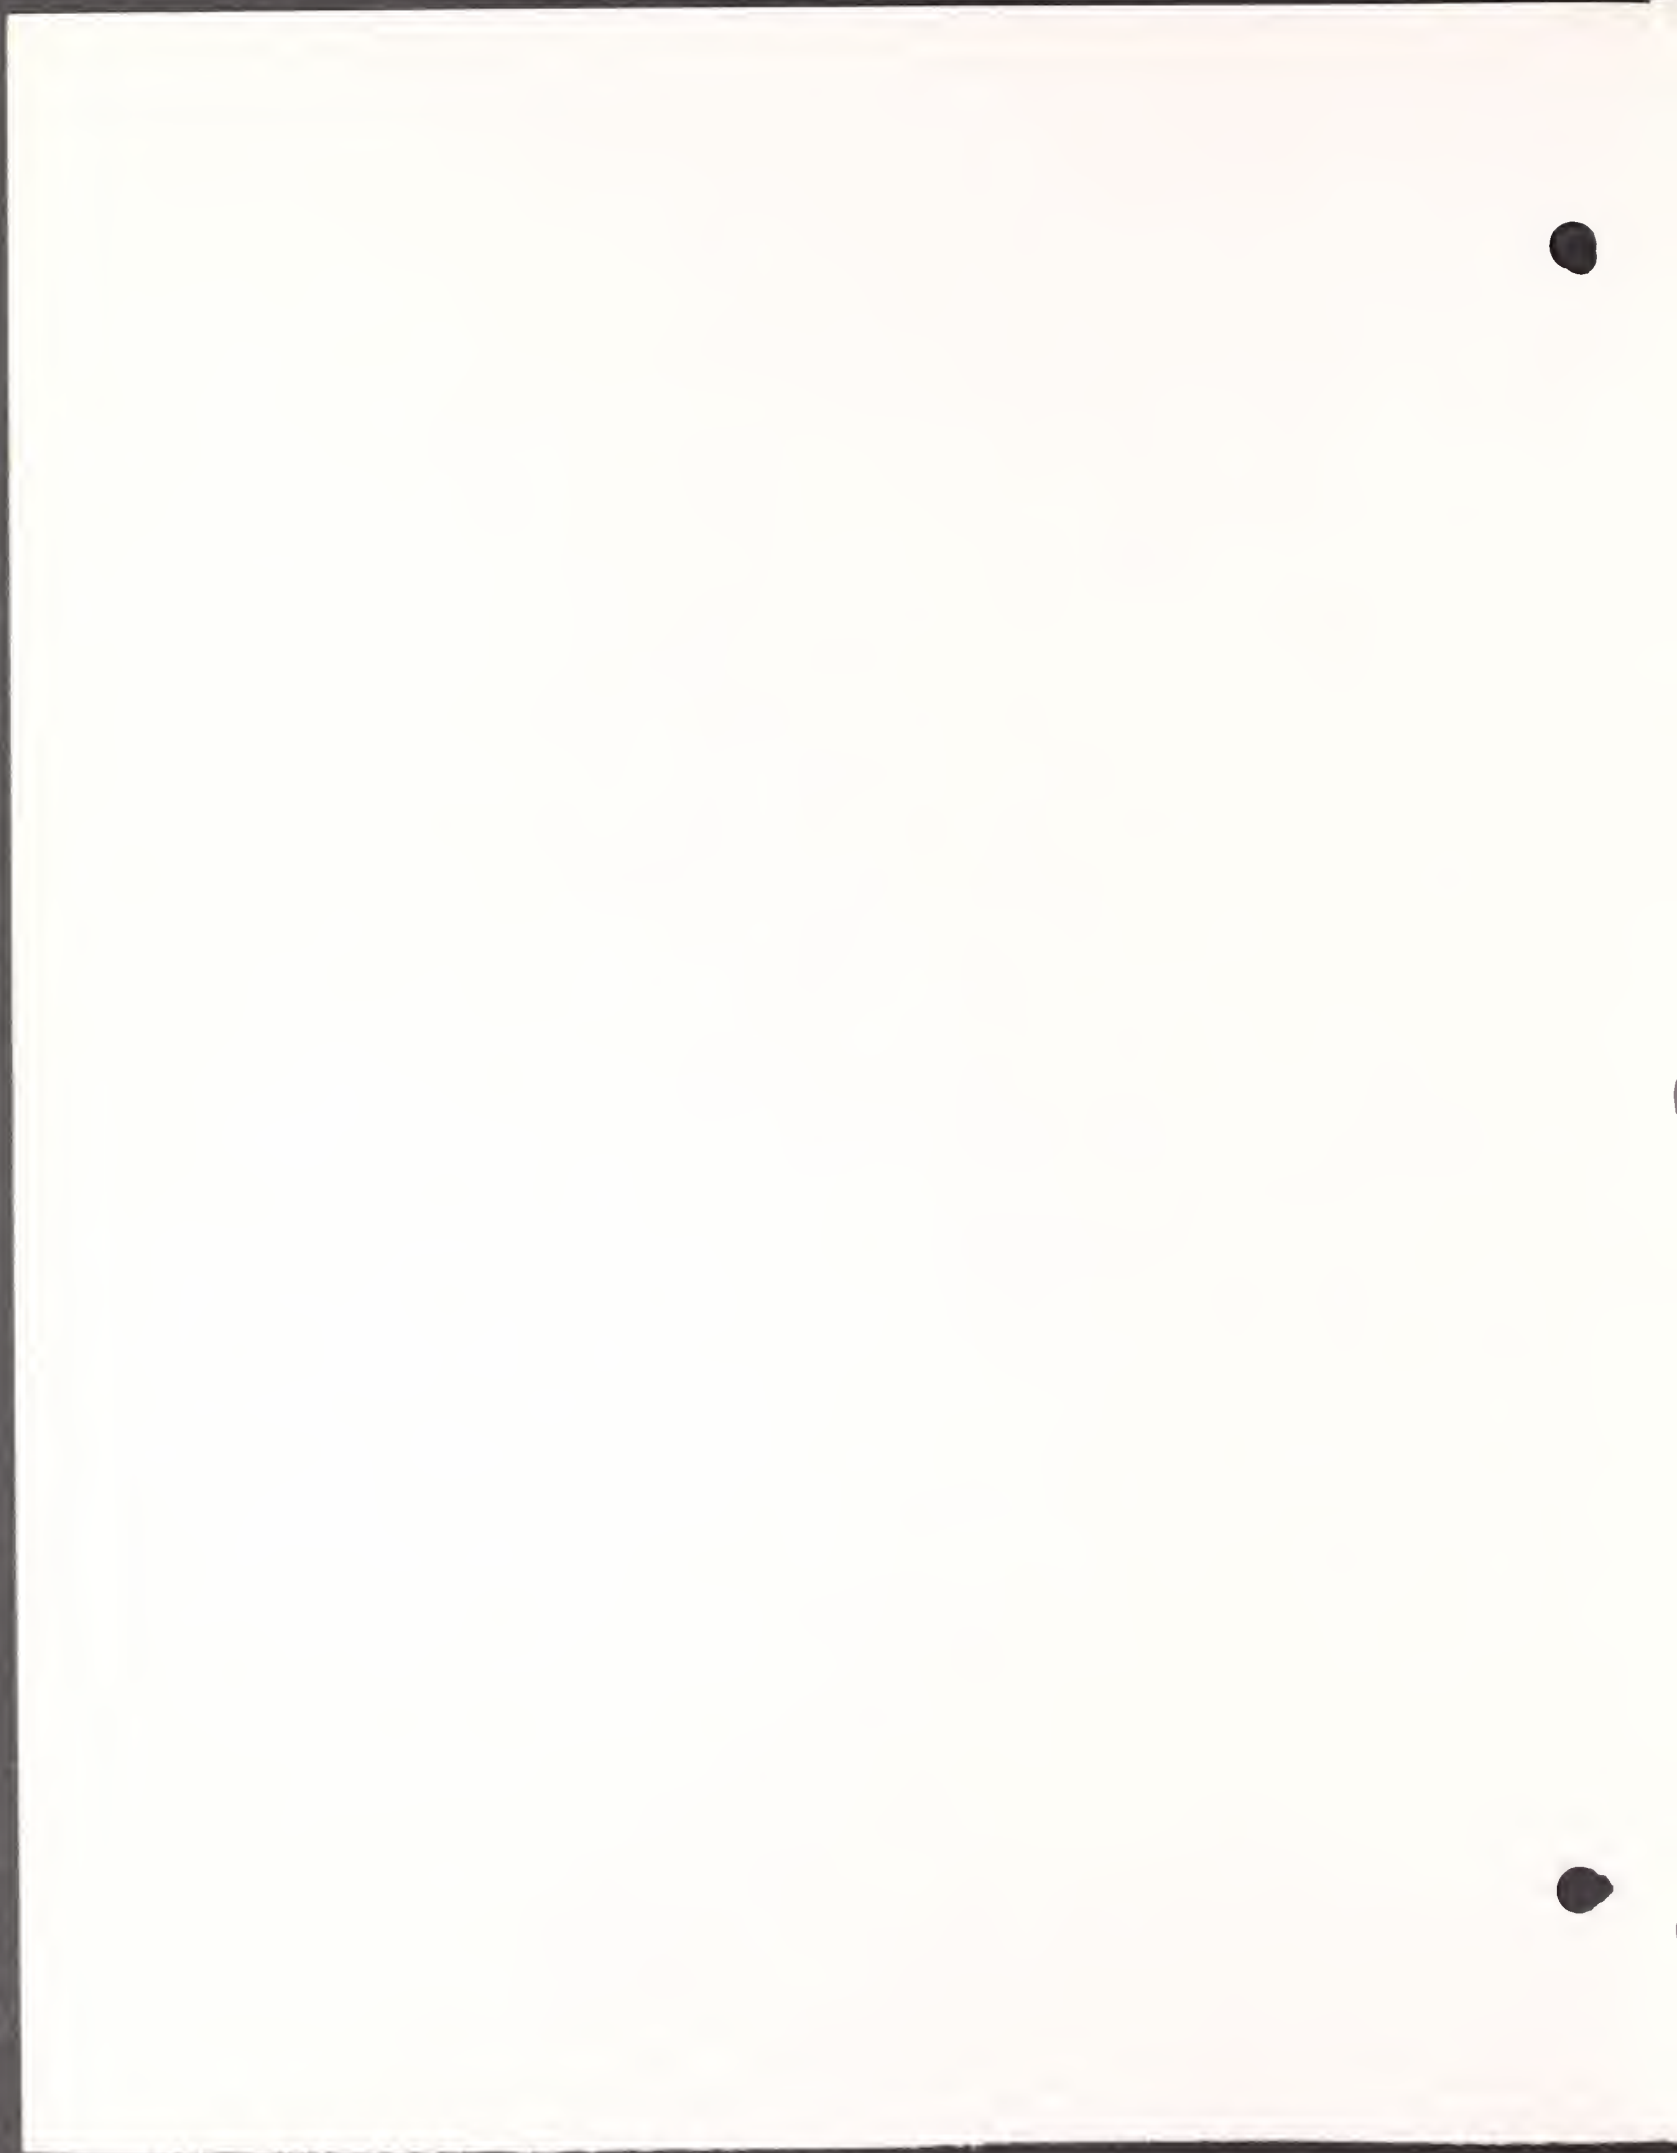

General Philip Schuyler was born at Albany, N. Y., in 1733, and would have been 55 years old in 1788. If this is the Schuyler of the first letter (and the transcriber does not understand the middle initial J.) his history is well known, as a soldier of the Revolutionary War, in Congress, and in the state Senate. His daughter Elizabeth married Alexander Hamilton,

The Material: The Letters are taken from the Correspondence of Samuel Blatchley Webb, edited Ford. The correspondence unfortunately is incomplete (nor could we expect otherwise) and has been edited with such painful regard to propriety, as almost to provoke doubts as to their being really the missives of a zealous and anxious suitor for a fair lady's hand. Of the lady's, more's the pity, we have not a line. But let us read what we have, with sympathy, and a little imagination.
